WHAT WE BELIEVE IN...

At Yorketown Community Children’s Centre we feel that Early Childhood Education and Care is not just about learning, it is much, much more. It’s about loving and caring for our children and raising them in the best possible way.

We believe that childhood is a unique time of life, to be valued and enjoyed in its own right. We also recognise that this is the time where foundations are laid for future health, learning and wellbeing. We value children growing up with the understanding, skills and dispositions to be caring people and effective learners, able to contribute to their world and to enjoy rich and successful relationships with others.

The Early Years Learning Framework (EYLF) provides the groundwork for our thinking in relation to early care and education. Fundamental to the EYLF is a view of children’s lives as characterised by belonging, being and becoming. From before birth children are connected to family, community, culture and place. Their earliest development and learning takes place through these relationships, particularly within families, who are children’s first and most influential educators. As children participate in everyday life, they develop interests and construct their own identities and understandings of the world.

BELONGING – knowing where and with whom you belong – is integral to human existence. Children belong first to a family, a cultural group, a neighbourhood and a wider community. Belonging acknowledges children’s interdependence with others and the basis of relationships in defining identities. In early childhood, and throughout life, relationships are crucial to a sense of belonging. Belonging is central to being and becoming in that it shapes who children are and who they can become.

BEING - recognizes the significance of the here and now in children’s lives. It is about the present and them knowing themselves, building and maintaining relationships with others, engaging with life’s joys and complexities, and meeting challenges in everyday life. The early childhood years are not solely preparation for the future but also about the present.

BECOMING - Children’s identities, knowledge, understandings, capacities, skills and relationships change during childhood. They are shaped by many different events and circumstances. Becoming reflects this process of rapid and significant change that occurs in the early years as young children learn and grow. It emphasizes learning to participate fully and actively in society.

WHAT WE DO...
Building a Community of learners

We believe in lifelong learning and give priority to creating opportunities for all members (staff, families, children) of our community to work together as learners. Our approach to learning provides children with a range of choices and lots of uninterrupted time to play. We are guided in our work by the Early Years Learning Framework and by current research.

We believe:

- Children have the right to play
- Children have the right to a rich learning environment
- Staff have the right to support in professional learning
- Families have a right to contribute their knowledge about their child and their world

Therefore we work to:
Learn together with families, children and other staff.
Document learning and share information about what is happening in our community.
Plan for and share children’s joy in discovery.
Ensure the highest level of involvement in each child
Be open to questioning what we do and why we do it

Building Partnerships

We believe a partnership approach to our work is an essential part of a quality care and learning environment for each child. Our goal is to build relationships with each child and family ensuring everyone has the opportunity to feel valued, respected and supported. By sharing information about children’s uniqueness, interests and experiences, we can work together to support each child to feel secure while they are with us.

We believe:

- Everyone has the right to be involved and be heard
- Children, families and staff have the right to be consulted, informed, make choices and be acknowledged
- Everyone has the right to feel connected with each other and the wider community

Therefore we work to:
Ensure that children’s and families’ perspectives and interests are central to our work.
Take responsibility to keep connections alive by listening to and communicating with each other and being open to feedback.
Ensure that a range of opportunities to participate and contribute are offered.

Building Wellbeing

We believe that one of our most important priorities is that each member of our community feels a strong sense of connection and belonging.
We also believe that our children need to have a positive sense of wellbeing and high levels of involvement in their activity.
Our work with children and families is guided by attachment theory. We want our community to be one that is enriched by the diversity of families, staff and children, and which provides a balance and range of experiences.

We believe:

- Children and families have the right to responsive caregiving practices and continuity of experience
- Children, families and staff have the right to a safe and healthy environment
- Everyone has the right to feel accepted and emotionally, physically and intellectually supported

Therefore we work to:

Build secure relationships.
Create an environment where everyone is listened to and responded to sensitively.
Work in ways that ensures everyone’s emotional and physical health and safety.
Provide an environment that builds connections with nature.
